HEALTH CARE EDUCATION. REIMAGINED.

In 1904, pharmacist and physician, Dr. Marshall B. Ketchum, opened the Los Angeles School of Ophthalmology and Optometry in Los Angeles.

Today, we are preparing the next generation of optometrists, physician assistants (PAs) and pharmacists to meet the expectations being set by collaborative practice models nationwide.

Our goal is to afford students opportunities for greater communication, quality of care and teamwork, while providing patients access to an interconnected team of health care professionals.

At Marshall B. Ketchum University, we are reimagining health care education every day.

WE BELIEVE EDUCATION IS BETTER THROUGH COLLABORATION.

Marshall B. Ketchum University prepares students to deliver compassionate health care to patients through interprofessional education.

Our students prosper from the education at MBKU and clinical experience at Ketchum Health. These experiences propel them to succeed in the models of collaborative care taking shape across the nation.

MBKU is committed to excellent teaching, state-of-the-art research and academic facilities as well as the personal and intellectual growth of our students.

STUDENTS AND FACULTY PLAY AN ACTIVE ROLE IN SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.

At MBKU you'll find a fusion of a prominent faculty and robust research where students and faculty partner to engage in scholarly work.

With a master's degree in vision science, optometry students can add new knowledge to the field of vision science while also expanding their career choices after graduation.

Research opportunities for all faculty and students abound at MBKU. Students are afforded the opportunity to build knowledge and skills with a faculty mentor, many as early as their first year.

PROVIDING PATIENT CENTERED CARE TO THE COMMUNITY.

Ketchum Health is the premier patient care and clinical teaching facility of Marshall B. Ketchum University. Community health care extends far beyond the Ketchum Health facilities through partnerships with the Special Olympics, Boys and Girls Club, Lions Club and more. We strive to promote health and well-being for our patients and offer faculty and student outreach opportunities to help communities here and abroad.

Here, students have the perfect Southern California backdrop to enjoy their time both in and out of the classroom. The connections developed here expand each student's network of health care professionals and personal friendships that will span decades.

ADVANCING OUR LEGACY OF EXCELLENT EDUCATION INTO THE FUTURE.

Marshall B. Ketchum University is leading a momentous change in health care education.

This change breaks down the traditional silos between different professional programs so students understand, on a comprehensive level, how to deliver excellent patient care in a team environment.

Dr. Ketchum would be proud. His legacy has grown to span three programs, educated thousands of successful health care professionals and continually impacts the community through compassionate care.
